AgustaWestland

About our sponsor....

AgustaWestland has a sales and industrial presence in the United States that spans 30 years. Based in Pennsylvania, AgustaWestland's helicopter assembly plant is located on the Northeast Philadelphia Airport. Since 2004, the plant has experienced tremendous and consistent growth resulting in its position as the company's third main assembly plant.

Market demand drove the plant's first major expansion in 2004 with the establishment of the AW119 helicopter assembly line, followed in 2005 by a second major expansion to increase production capacity for the AW139 line of helicopters. The current facility is 300,000 square feet, with production capacity exceeding 60 helicopters per year.

Currently, over 500 highly skilled employees work at the Philadelphia plant, all dedicated in various ways to the commercial sale, assembly, completion and maintenance and customer support of the AW139, AW119Ke, GrandNew and AW109 Power aircraft. The Philadelphia plant features production and final assembly for the AW139 and AW119 models as well as AW109 Power and GrandNew completions and customization.

Thank you for joining us this evening and your interest in the AHS. Please fill out this guest voucher to receive the guest rate.

About our speaker...

William (Bill) Hunt
Executive Vice-President of Operations
Agusta Westland Philadelphia Corporation

Bill is the Executive Vice-President of Operations at AgustaWestland Philadelphia Corp. (AWPC) and has been with the company since 2006. AWPC is a leading commercial helicopter manufacturing, sales and service corporation, located on Northeast Philadelphia Airport. It is a subsidiary of AgustaWestland Corporation (based in Cascina Costa, Italy) and has major divisions in Italy, UK and Philadelphia with 12,000 employees and $6B in annual sales.

Within his role, Bill is responsible for Assembly and Flight Line Operations, Materials Planning, Warehouse Operations, Quality Control and Assurance, Production Engineering and Design Organization. The Production Operations team is made up of 330 employees, responsible for the assembly and delivery of the AW119 Koala and the AW139 to both domestic and worldwide customers.

Prior to joining AgustaWestland, Bill was employed at the Boeing Company for 21 years where he was engaged in multiple programs including the Fixed Leading Edge Wing program, V-22, BB609, Apache and the CH-47 program. The CH-47 program was his last assignment where he was the Operations Program Manager responsible for the overall performance of the Operations team in building and delivering the CH-47F & G models to the US Army customer. Bill worked in several functional areas while at Boeing including Industrial Engineering, Composite Manufacturing and Materials Management.

Bill received his Bachelor of Science in Manufacturing Engineering from Spring Garden College in 1983 and received his Executive Master in Business Administration from Villanova University in 2007.
